Let hollow, heartless, gay ones scorn, And this warm hope deride, Still, they can have but little blies Who hate their own fireside!

'Tis there that prattle children dear, Their parents' joy and pride, And better than a kingly throne, Is that thrice blest fireside!

Tis there the erring youth obtains Advice his steps to guide, And oft thro' life will memory bring Sweet thoughts of that fireside.

*Tis there that feelings holy-true-Begin and e'er abide, For where can kindliness exist, If not at home's fireside?

It little matters where you roam, Throughout this world so wide, If Providence will only grant A glad and bright fireside!

There peaceful may your hours pass by, Till fleeting years shall guide, And with no better joy than this-To love your own fireside!

May God then watch and keep them safe, May never ill betide, And happier be the lot of all Who bless their own fireside
